AMUSEMENTS.

CRITICS PRAISE MRS. LEMOYNE.

No actress in the present generation has received more spontaneous and enthusiastic praise from the severest critics of the land than Mrs. LeMoynes who will be seen in this city at the Grand on Friday night, in Glen MacDonough's new play, "Among Those Present." The roster of critical commentators on her work includes all the principal newspapers in the United States in the cities which she has visited since her stellar career, and all have been highly commendatory. Clyde Fitch, the well known playwright, declares that she is "Mrs. Kendal and Mrs. John Wood rolled into one."

The New York Sun said: "She is much like Mrs. Kendal in the distinctiveness and naturalness of her methods." The New York Dramatic Mirror said: "Mrs. LeMoynes has made one of the most pronounced comedy successes since the days of Agnes Booth in 'The Young Mrs. Winthrop.'" Yet with all these complimentary comparisons the efforts to classify Mrs. LeMoynes are not completed. Her position upon the stage is unique, and by virtue of her strong personality, her delightful elocution, her spontaneity and naturalness, she remains in a class all her own. Prices—Lower floor, $1.50; balcony, 75 cts. to $1.

MRS. L'MOYNE TO-NIGHT.

There is no doubt but the appearance of Mrs. LeMoynes at the Grand to-night in "Among Those Present" will be a theatrical treat, and it will really be a shame if she is not greeted by a crowded house. The Courier-Journal of Tuesday said in regard to her:

"Without discussing in detail the social questions involved in her play, there is no doubt that it illustrates—it can be stated that Mrs. LeMoynes makes an interesting study of the chief figure. It would be difficult to find one of this gifted woman's contemporaries who could make the portrayal so vital with human nature, so finished, so natural, so splendid in every phase. The comedy scenes are carried with a lightness of touch that are refreshingly delightful."

The Times said: "Mrs. LeMoynes' work is marked by ease, grace and the subtle comedy which is one of her chief charms. Her reception was enthusiastic. Her company is of the merit she always requires."

"THE BELL OF NEW YORK."

The record of the famous "Belle of New York" Company, which comes to the Grand on next Thursday, Jan. 29, is unique in its way. The company is the most successful organization ever seen from the popular Casino Theatre, New York. Its reputation is well known to all and covers both continents.

MADLINE BESLEY
THE BELLE OF NEW YORK

After a successful run in American metropolises, this merry musical comedy was taken to London, and there it established a record hitherto unprecedented abroad for an American comedy of 975 performances. In Australia the company's success was equally noteworthy, and a run of 342 performances was achieved. At home the success of "The Bell" has never been approached by a similar attraction and at the conclusion of last season the astonishing record for this company figures up to 2,500 performances. It is a reputation Manager Sam S. Shubert is justly proud of and his excellent company is starting out this season to roll up more centuries to be added to its remarkable record.

—O—

The Howard-Dorset Company will present "The Circus Girl" here at the Grand, on Wednesday, January 28. The Howard-Dorset Company is an old favorite and will no doubt be greeted by a packed house. "The Circus Girl" is the best play they have in their repertoire and is said to be first-class.

A PHILIPPINE BANK.

Aguinaldo Sends a Petition to the Congress.

Proposes a Loan of $20,000,000 in Gold and a Credit of $80,000,000 Gold to Be Used For the Development of Agriculture.

Washington, Jan. 21.—Secretary Root transmitted to the senate and house copies of a petition received by him, through Gov. Taft from Aguinaldo, the late insurgent leader in the Philippines. Aguinaldo says in part: "Profoundly impressed by the sorrows and calamities which afflict my people, and bearing in mind the good intentions which have inspired the acts of the civil commission, I have taken heart to present a project of a purely economic character which in my opinion would remedy, if not completely, at least in great part, the precarious situation in which we all find ourselves.

"I propose to the honorable commission to obtain from congress a United States treasury loan of $20,000,000 in gold in cash, and also a credit loan of $80,000,000 gold, which will guarantee the issue of paper to serve as money in the islands. This sum shall be issued for the development and improvement of Philippine agriculture and shall be paid within 50 years, the payments being made in three installments at the end of 10, 15 and 20 years respectively and at the rate of $25,000,000 at the end of the first period, which would cancel so much of the credit, and $25,000,000 and $50,000,000 at the end of the two remaining periods. The amount of the credit would not be taken out of the United States treasury, like the loan, and both would be without interest and could never be transferred to any other foreign nation.

"When the loan and credit were approved and the above mentioned sum here in the Philippines, a bank would be opened which could be called 'United States America Agricultural Philippine bank' and which shall be under the inspection and supervision of the insular government.

"After the civil commission had dictated the proper regulations and established all the necessary safeguards for the security and stability of the bank, the bank would begin to operate, making available of the agriculturists such sums as they should ask for in compliance with the necessary formalities, at an annual maximum of 4 per cent., payable semi-annually.

"From the $100,000,000 capital will be subtracted $20,000,000 for the construction of buildings for branch banks throughout the archipelago and for other necessary preliminary expenses.

"Subtracting from the annual income of $3,920,000 the annual expense for salaries and other necessary expenses of the bank, which may be reckoned at about $700,000, there would remain a net annual income of $3,220,000, which, added to the capital at compound interest, under the same condition during the following years, at the end of 16 years would free both the actual and the supplementary credit; that is, the bank would have liquidated its debt to the United States treasury, and there would remain a balance of at least $40,000,000 for the continuance of its work. Allowing four years more for ample time makes the 20 years mentioned.

"By the time that the United States treasury has been repaid at the end of the stated period of 20 years, the Philippine treasury would have at least $50,000,000, which would serve to guarantee the issue of paper money to that amount.

"In case Filipinos should wish to acquire the bank by making of it a joint stock company without otherwise altering its organization and methods, the government would concede to them the title, without prejudice to its right to require repayment of the amounts incurred by the foundation of said bank or other necessary expense.

"It may be that when this project is known I shall be called an enthusiast and a dreamer, and it will be said that I ought not to involve myself in matters that force me out of the retired life which I have intended to follow since my imprisonment and which, as I believe, nothing that I have done has broken into until the present time. But the contemplation of the bitter misfortunes which oppress this suffering people, exhausted by evils at most calamities without number, obliges me to leave my retirement to fulfill what I believe to be my duty.

(Signed) "Respectfully,
"EMILIO AGUINALDO FAMY."

UNITED MINERS.

They Will Make a Demand For An Advance in Wages.

Indianapolis, Ind., Jan. 21.—The United Mine Workers of America are in convention in this city. President Mitchell, who is in attendance, delivered an address.

Following the reports of the officers, the convention adjourned till 2 o'clock. The afternoon session lasted an hour and Frank Thomas, of Minersville, Pa., presented President Mitchell with a gavel made from wood taken from the house and tomb of Patrick Henry in Charlotte county, Virginia.

Indianapolis, Ind., Jan. 22.—In the United Mine Workers' convention Wednesday there were not over a score of recommendations made by the resolutions committee and nearly all of them were in reference to the wage question. The recommendation of President Mitchell in his annual address that a substantial increase in wages should be demanded was borne in mind, when the recommendations were made. The demands range from 15 to 25 per cent. increase over the wages of last year. There were also demands made for a change in the differentials between machine and pick mining. Other resolutions referred to the scale committee insisted that the wages of the common laborers be increased both inside and outside the mines.

President Mitchell announced the appointment of Delegates Ben Davis, of West Virginia, and Bowden, of Tennessee, on the wage committee.

The United Mine Workers' national wage committee, of which W. H. Haskins, of Ohio, is chairman, and Jas. Cantwell, of the Indiana block, and George Hargrave, of the Indiana bituminous districts, are members, got down to work. It began hearing reports and receiving recommendations on what wage demand should be made from representatives that are here from the 24 mining states.

Wage Committeemen Patrick Dolan, of the Pittsburgh district, said Wednesday: "Our wage committee is composed of 16 miners, who will meet the committee of 16 operators in Indianapolis, beginning January 30. It will take us several days to draft the demands that are being made by the different districts and it may be Saturday or Monday before we get around to a report. It seems that the Ohio and West Virginia miners are demanding that we ask for a 25 per cent. increase. The miners of Indiana, Illinois, Western Pennsylvania and Central Pennsylvania are talking about asking for an advance of 15 to 20 per cent."

"It looks as though the wage committee goes into conference with the limits of discussion set—15 per cent. as a minimum and 25 per cent. as a maximum—but what the recommendation to the convention will be, no one can tell. President Mitchell has advised the miners to ask for a 'substantial increase' and it looks like they would comply with his request."

The wage committee only frames the demand to be made on the bituminous operators in what is known as the central competitive district. This district includes the states of Indiana, Illinois and Ohio, and the Pittsburgh or Fifth district in Pennsylvania.

MARRIED SEVEN TIMES.

Rev. Marion Lane Convicted of Bigamy at Port Gibson, Miss.

New Orleans, Jan. 22.—A special from Port Gibson, Miss., says: The jury in the case of Rev. Marion Lane, also known as Jean Skyles, charged with bigamy, returned a verdict of guilty Wednesday. He was one of the most learned theologians and eloquent orators in the state. It was brought out at the trial that Skyles had been married seven times. Evidence showing marriages in Carville, Tex., Russellville, Ark., and Woodville, was presented to the jury. After his last marriage at Woodville Skyles fled to Texas and was captured at San Antonio. The defense was insanity.

FORT AT SAN CARLOS.

A Second Bombardment by the German War Vessels.

Fleeing Indian Fishermen Say That Village Had Been Fired By German Shells and Was Burning —Much Excitement.

Maracaibo, Venezuela, Jan. 12.—Three German warships, supposed to be the Panther, Vineta and Falke, began shelling the fort of San Carlos at 10:30 o'clock Wednesday morning. The fort returned the fire. The engagement was in progress at 1 o'clock Wednesday afternoon.

A press correspondent, in a row-boat, approached to within three miles of the fort at noon. The roar of the guns was terrific. The Panther appeared to be not more than 500 yards from the fort. Her guns were fired every few minutes. The fort could not be seen for the clouds of smoke, but it was plain that the Venezuelan gunners were answering the German fire splendidly and with great rapidity.

At 1 o'clock in the afternoon an explosion occurred apparently in the fort and a cloud of smoke covered part of the ramparts. A number of Indian fishermen were intercepted fleeing from the direction of the fort in their dugout canoes. They reported that the smoke seen was from the burning village of San Carlos, which had been shelled by the German ships and was in flames.

The shelling of San Carlos has created much excitement among the German residents of this port, who have protested against the action of the warships.

London, Jan. 22.—The news of the second bombardment of Fort San Carlos reached London too late to be printed in the papers of Thursday morning, which nearly all comment upon the "Olive branch" which the German chancellor, Count von Bulow, is holding out to Great Britain in his speech and in the reichstag, and upon the difficulties in which a chancellor who is obliged to defend his imperial master's acts without being responsible for them become involved.

President Castro's demand that the blockade be raised before the negotiations are opened is regarded here as certain to create further delays, and the belief has been expressed that the second bombardment of the Maracaibo fort will greatly increase the difficulties of the situation.

ISLANDS OF LOS ROQUES.

The Population Reported to Be Upon the Verge of Starvation.

La Guayra, Jan. 22.—The Dutch cruiser De Ruyter arrived here Wednesday morning. The cruiser has visited the islands of Los Roques, where she found the population, who are charcoal burners trading with La Guayra and whose sloops have been seized by the blockaders, to be upon the verge of starvation. The cruiser left provisions and water for eight days. The plan is to convey the inhabitants of Los Roques to the Dutch island of Curacao to be pushed forward as rapidly as possible. A schooner will be dispatched from here for that purpose. Los Roques is 120 miles north of La Guayra.

Numerous other articles went to relic hunters and dealers in antiques.

BRIBERY CHARGED.

Alleged Attempt to Influence Congressman's Vote.

Washington, Jan. 22.—Through a sub-committee the house committee on naval affairs is investigating an allegation of attempt to bribe one of its members. The charge is made by Representative Lessler, of New York, who says he was approached with an offer of $5,000. The object of the offer was to secure his support, as a member of the committee, to a proposition for an appropriation for additional sub-marine torpedo boats. The sensation developed when, during a discussion of the Holland torpedo boats, Mr. Lessler, who was opposing an authorization of more boats, made the statement that he had been offered subsidy to change his sentiments.

The sub-committee of the house committee on naval affairs, which is investigating the charge made by Representative Lessler, of New York, that he had been approached for the purpose of influencing his action as a member of the committee on the proposition to authorize the construction of submarine torpedo boats, will make at least a partial report to the full committee Thursday morning.

Mr. Lessler was again before the sub-committee Wednesday at both the morning and afternoon sessions, and submitted to a rather vigorous cross-examination. It was with some reluctance that he disclosed names in connection with the charges he made of improper attempts to influence his vote, but finally on pressure gave two names. One of the persons named, he said, threatened him with defeat at the last election if he did not vote as desired on certain propositions. The other name he used in connection with his charges of an attempt to influence his vote by pecuniary considerations. Mr. Lessler's charges are said to have lacked definiteness, when he was interrogated by members of the sub-committee. The substance of his story was not that he had been actually offered a bribe of $5,000, but that he could get $5,000 if he would vote "right." The members of the sub-committee Wednesday continued to observe the pledge of secrecy, they had taken and Mr. Lessler himself declined to make any statement for publication.

THE MILITIA BILL.

President Roosevelt Affixed His Signature to the Measure.

Washington, Jan. 22.—President Roosevelt Wednesday afternoon signed the militia bill, recently passed by congress. The final act in the marking of the new law was attended by a pretty ceremony. Gathered around the table as the president appended his signature to the measure were Secretary Root, Secretary Shaw, Assistant Secretary Sanger, Representatives Dick, Parker, Stark, Wiley, Conroy, Gaines and Bristow, all of the house committee on military affairs; W. E. Marsh, secretary of the committee; Gen. M. H. Byers, adjutant general of Iowa; Gen. Bird Spencer, adjutant general of New Jersey; Col. E. J. Diminick, secretary of the National Guard association.

After the president had signed the bill, Secretary Root delivered a brief speech of congratulation to the committee on the enactment of so excellent a measure. Gen. Dick, the author of the bill and the president of the National Guard association, made a fitting response. President Roosevelt then spoke of the merits of the bill. He expressed the hope that no president ever would be confronted by such an emergency as would render it necessary for him to avail himself of the services of the troops provided for in the bill, but congratulated the committee and the country on its enactment and said he regarded the citizen soldiery of the nation as a most important factor in the protection of the country. The president gave the pen with which he had signed the measure to Col. Diminick.

AUSTRIAN MANUFACTURERS.

They Discussed Participation in the St. Louis Exposition.

Vienna, Jan. 22.—At the request of the government, the Vienna chamber of commerce Wednesday convened a meeting of Austrian expert manufacturers to discuss participation in the St. Louis exposition. Representatives of many prominent firms were present. The debate was a long one and had special reference to the possibility of selling goods in the United States in the face of the high tariff. Sixty-seven manufacturers engaged in the export trade signified their willingness to send exhibits to St. Louis. The general feeling was expressed, however, that only such classes of manufacturers should participate in the exposition who reasonably could hope to meet the tariff situation, thus avoiding a repetition of the disappointment which was experienced by many of the firms that exhibited at Philadelphia and Chicago without the slightest chance of doing business in America.

Off For the Philippines.
San Antonio, Tex., Jan. 22.—The 17th field battery left Fort Sam Houston en route to the Philippines. This is the first organization to move out of the department of Texas under the provisions of the order recently issued by the war department.

Famine in North Sweden.
London, Jan. 22.—In a dispatch from Stockholm, the correspondent of the Daily Mail says: "The famine in the north of Sweden is becoming worse because of the early winter, heavy snow falls and intense cold."

His Father's Example.

Army and navy officers are enjoying a hearty chuckle over the discomfiture of a well-known retired officer who is a familiar figure at several clubs in Washington. This officer has a son of considerable promise, but of tender years. A few years ago, so the story goes, the officer married a fortune and soon after discovered that he had heart disease and went on the retired list. "Jack," said a visitor to the son the other day, "what are you going to be when you grow up?" "Well," said the eight-year-old with grave deliberation, "I've been thinking of that for some time and I think that when I'm a man I'll get heart disease and go on the retired list, just like papa."—Chicago Chronicle.

WOUNDS WERE FATAL.

Editor Gonzales Dead After Four Days' Suffering.

Direct Cause of Death Was Sepsis, Due to a Sloughing of the Large Bowel About the Site of the Injury to That Organ.

Columbia, S. C., Jan. 20.—After four days of suffering, death came shortly after noon Monday to Narciso Gener Gonzales, editor of the Columbia State, who was shot last Thursday by Lieut. Gov. James H. Tillman. He was unconscious when the end came.

His wife, his three brothers, his sister, members of the editorial staff of the State and the surgeons were present.

A few minutes after the end came it was known all over Columbia. There is no apparent anger, no display of excitement, but an unnatural quiet is noticeable throughout the city.

An autopsy on the body was held by Dr. A. B. Knowlton Monday afternoon. Drs. Legrand, Gueyrey and Jas. H. McIntosh, who attended Mr. Gonzales, assisted.

It is understood that the finding of the autopsy will be in general that the direct cause of death was sepsis, due to a sloughing of the large bowel at and about the site of the injury to that organ. The point of entrance of the bullet was on the right side of the abdomen, six inches below the right nipple and two and a half inches to the right of the middle line. The point of exit was on the left nipple and nine inches to the left of the middle line. There was a slight injury to the front wall of the stomach. Every vital organ was examined and all found typically normal.

Soon after the death of Mr. Gonzales a telephone message carried the news to Capt. Sligh, the county jailer, and he apprised Col. Tillman. It is stated that the latter received the intelligence without expression or betokening any emotion. He was asked Monday night if he would make a statement and replied through his brother-in-law, ex-Judge Buchanan, that he had nothing to say.

N. G. GONZALES.

Gen. Lee's Birthday.

Louisville, Ky., Jan. 20.—The birthday of Gen. Robert E. Lee was generally observed throughout the south Monday. Special exercises being held in nearly all of the southern cities, where, in many instances, a holiday was observed. One of the most notable memorial services was held at Austin, Texas, and was participated in by Hon. John Reagan, former postmaster general of the confederacy. At Little Rock, Ark., the legislature adjourned in honor of the day, and a large memorial meeting was held in Charleston, S. C., and Richmond, Va.

Lieut. Gen. Miles.

St. Petersburg, Jan. 20.—Lieut. Gen. Miles, U. S. A., accompanied by Mrs. Miles and his party, arrived here Monday from Moscow, after having spent two days in that city. Gen. Miles traveled on a special train and was accompanied by an escort through Manchuria.

In an interview Monday the general said he had been impressed with the magnitude and the future possibilities of the country, which has been opened by the trans-Siberian railroad.

Gen. Miles will remain several days, then proceeding to Berlin, Paris and London.

Precautionary Measures.

Guayaquil, Ecuador, Jan. 20.—The board of health has reconsidered its order of Sunday to close the port to steamers from Panama or Mexican ports, and will now close the port only to steamers from plague-infected Mexican ports.

Peace Agreement Not Accepted.

Cincinnati, Jan. 20.—After being in session at the Grand hotel here Monday afternoon and again until late Monday night, the National Baseball league failed to accept the proposed peace agreement.

THE ISLE OF PINES.

American Residents Object to Being Taxed By Cubans.

Havana, Jan. 21.—The Americans residing in the Isle of Pines deny the general assumption of the Cuban government that the United States has no special interest in the island, and it is not likely to insist on the eventual ownership of it. In any event, they seem confident of having the support of the United States, if necessary, in their resistance to being governed and taxed by Cuban officials, pending a settlement of the question of the ownership of the island. The matter is expected to receive important consideration in connection with the settlement of the location of the coal stations and other pending questions between Cuba and the United States.

Recently, the American residents of the island unitedly notified the alcalde of the Isle of Pines and the Cuban government of their intention to resist, by force if necessary, the collection of taxes or any assumption of authority over the island by the Cuban government. The taxes are now falling due and every American has pledged himself not to pay them. The Americans' contention is founded on the section of the Platt amendment which expressly omits the Isle of Pines from the boundaries of Cuba and leaves the title to it for future adjustment by treaty.

Some three hundred Americans have, since the war, taken up their residence in the Isle of Pines, and it is estimated that five hundred Americans have interests in the islands. The American portion of the population is not of an adventurous character, but is largely composed of people of mature years who have engaged in the business of fruit raising. Their desire that the island remain American is not purely sentimental, since, they claim as a Cuban possession, it would receive no more than 20 per cent. tariff preference, while as a territory of the United States the islanders hope for free trade with America.

The government, while acknowledging that the matter of the ownership of the island is open, holds that it has default control over the island for the time being at least, and that it is therefore authorized to levy taxes and perform other governmental functions.

MAZATLAN SHIP-YARD.

It Has Been Ordered Burned By the Mexican Authorities.

Nogales, Ariz., Jan. 21.—Advice from Guaymas state that orders have been received at Mazatlan by the federal authorities to burn the ship-yard which was erected a few years ago at a large cost to the federal government. The destruction of the ship-yard is only part of a program of desperate measures to be taken to rid the city of bubonic plague. It is now believed that the plague has been contracted from infected vessels coming in from the east and has been carried ashore by rats or some other animals. It is impossible to get rid of these pests without destroying the buildings they infest and, if necessary, all the adobe buildings in Mazatlan will be burned or razed to the ground.

THE KILLING OF WM. CRAIG.

Motorman Pleads Guilty and Was Sentenced For Six Months.

Pittsfield, Mass., Jan. 21.—The distressing incident connected with President Roosevelt's visit to the Berkshire hills last summer, when his carriage was demolished by an electric car, and his secret service guard, William Craig, killed, was finally closed Tuesday in the superior court. The motorman, Euclid Madden, pleaded guilty to a charge of manslaughter and was sentenced by Judge Pierce to six months in the house of correction, and ordered to pay a fine of $500. The conductor of the car, James T. Kelley, who was also indicted, had his case placed on file.

REAR END COLLISION.

Nine Men Killed and Eight or Ten Injured on the Great Northern.

Seattle, Wash., Jan. 21.—A special from Wenatchee, Wash., says: Nine men are dead and eight or ten injured as a result of a rear end collision on the Great Northern Tuesday morning at a point known as Happy Hollow, just above Chivawauk.

A bridge gang train smashed into an engine standing on a rotary snow plow. A car containing 50 men belonging to the bridge crew was thrown from the track. The dead and injured were all members of the work gang. Neither engineer, fireman or brakeman were among the injured.

President Accepts the Invitation.

Hansbrough Re-Elected Senator.

President of Hobart College.

Geneva, N. Y., Jan. 21.—Rev. Dr. Langdon C. Stewardson, chaplain and professor of philosophy of Lehigh university, was elected president of Hobart college at the semi-annual meeting of the board of trustees Tuesday.

FIFTY-SEVENTH CONGRESS.

Second Session.

Washington, Jan. 17.—House.—The house devoted the day to private war claims, passing about 20. The two features of the day were the defeat of a claim of B. F. Moody & Co., of Keokuk, Ia., for the payment of the amount deducted from their contract for furnishing equipment to the Third Iowa cavalry by the famous commission which unearthed the army contract frauds in St. Louis in 1863 and the fight of Mr. Payne, the floor leader of the majority, against an omnibus resolution to refer 90 southern claims, aggregating $400,000, for stores and supplies, taken by the union army during the civil war, to the court of claims for finding of fact under the Tucker act. The former bill led to a lively controversy between two Iowa members.

Washington, Jan. 20.—Senate.—Mr. Bailey (Tex.) objected to consideration by unanimous consent of all bills from the republican side on the ground that the senators from New York had interfered with a matter purely local to the state of Texas. A discussion arose, which was terminated by Mr. Cullom moving an executive session to consider the Cuban reciprocity treaty. After half an hour in executive session, the doors were re-opened and Mr. Foraker continued his remarks favoring statehood for Oklahoma, Arizona and New Mexico.

House.—The house transacted considerable business Monday. Several miscellaneous measures were passed, among them the senate Hawaiian fore-claims bill. The consular and diplomatic appropriation bill, the third of the regular budgets, were passed and fair progress was made with the District of Columbia appropriation bill. During consideration of the diplomatic bill Mr. McClellan (N. Y.) precipitated a discussion concerning our diplomatic and consular service, which took a wide range and led to some rather scandalous charges against our consular representatives in Mexico by Mr. Slayden (Tex.). Mr. McClellan submitted figures to show that our consulates, compared with those of other first-class countries, were underpaid but overmanned. Mr. Grosvenor (O.) declared the charges against our consular officials were unjustified, maintaining that it was the opinion of European publicists that we had the most efficient consular service in the world.

Washington, Jan. 21.—Senate.—The senate Tuesday passed the legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bill. When the statehood bill was taken up Mr. Quay demanded an immediate vote, coupling his demand with the statement that he did not care whether any senators desired to speak on the subject or not. Mr. Beveridge discussed the measure, opposing statehood for Oklahoma, Arizona and New Mexico. On the conclusion of his remarks, Mr. Quay submitted a number of propositions for the fixing of a day when a vote could be taken, but to all such Mr. Beveridge objected. Senator Hanna spoke briefly in opposition to the bill.

House.—The house passed the District of Columbia appropriation bill and subsequently began consideration of the Philippine coinage bill. The general debate on the District bill was largely devoted to discussion of the Alaska boundary line dispute. Mr. Cochran (Mo.) denounced as "cowardly surrender" the course of the state department. Mr. Hepburn (Ia.) took up the challenge and countered with the charge that democratic administrations had surrendered the territory between latitudes 49 and 54:40 and also the republic of Texas. While Mr. Cochran was speaking of the "trucking policy of the United States to Great Britain" a stylishly dressed young woman in the gallery leaned forward and cried out: "You lie." She then left the gallery.

Washington, Jan. 22.—Senate.—For three hours Wednesday Mr. Burnham (N. H.) addressed the senate in opposition to the omnibus statehood bill. Becoming fatigued, he suspended his remarks until Thursday. Mr. Cullom explained the necessity for considering the Cuban reciprocity treaty and appealed to Mr. Quay to permit an executive session. The latter refused and the matter was put to a vote, with the result that the senate refused to go into executive session, 37 to 27, which was the first test vote on the statehood bill. Toward the end of the day Mr. Hoar criticized the president for expressing his approval or disapproval of bills before congress had acted on them.

House.—The house spent Wednesday in debate on the Philippine coinage bill. The minority offered a substitute providing for the introduction of the American currency system into the island and it received powerful support from Mr. Hill (rep., Ct.), who declared on the floor that the proposition for the extension of the American system had the support of Secretary Shaw and other high officials of the treasury department. Those who participated in the debate were Messrs. Cooper (Wis.), Jones (Va.), Maddox (Ga.), Patterson (Tenn.), Shafrath (Col.), Crumpacker (Ind.), Williams (Ill.), Hill (Ct.), Cannon (Ill.), Robinson (Ind.) and Williams (Miss.).

Internal Revenue Collections.

Washington, Jan. 22.—The monthly statement of the collector of internal revenue shows that for the month of December, 1902, the total collections were $20,943,852, a decrease compared with December, 1901, of $2,069,062. For the last six months the receipts show a falling off of $22,872,931.

Senator Fairbanks Re-Elected.

Indianapolis, Ind., Jan. 21.—The house and senate met Tuesday in separate session and re-elected United States Senator Charles W. Fairbanks. The vote will be canvassed Wednesday in joint session. There was no opposition to Senator Fairbanks.

Miss Clara Morris' Illness.

THE GIRLS WILL WAIT.—There will no doubt be a refined audience to witness the performance of "Among Those Present" at the Grand to-night, and it is to be hoped that the performance will not be marred—as most of them are—by the young "Johnnies" who sit on the front seats, jumping up and starting out just as the climax is reached in the last act. It won't take two minutes longer to get out if they will just keep their seats until the curtain falls. Everybody sees them and know they are there, and it is not necessary for them make themselves so conspicuous and at the same time annoy other people.

Fiscal Court.

Fiscal Court met yesterday with a full board of Magistrates present. The following business was transacted:

The North Middletown & Lexington Traction Co., which has a franchise for building an electric line between Lexington and North Middletown, was granted an extension of one year.

Jailer Geo. W. Judy was allowed $2 per day for attending court instead of $1 as has been the custom.

P. I. McCarthy was appointed commissioner and receiver to sell and collect the money for the court house bonds. The money is to be used in building the new court house.

Contract between the city and county was made and signed whereby the city takes charge of Main street within the city limits.

Turnpike Committee will meet Saturday with a Committee from the City Council to discuss the matter in regard to the new bridge being built across Stoner. It is hoped that the two committees will get together on this matter and decide to build the bridge, which is greatly needed and should by all means be built.

No light was ordered placed by the dark covered bridge on the Georgetown pike.

"Stay In Your Own Back Yard."

There are over one hundred cases of small pox in Mason county, and it is said to be in a very bad form and is handled in a very loose way by the Board of Health. It is said that when one member of a family is taken down with the dreaded disease that they bundle up the whole family and chuck them in the pest house and the physician that attends them is allowed to roam the streets and spread the disease.

There is also small pox in our neighboring counties of Fayette and Woodford.

Paris has a good Health Board and nearly everybody has been vaccinated, so, if there is any one who has not had their arm or leg scratched, they had better have it attended to, and then "stay in your own back yard," and you need have no fear of catching the loathsome disease from our neighbors.

The above information, however, has not been gleaned from our exchanges, as they have withheld the true facts about the matter and have let innocent people go blindly around taking chances of either catching the disease or carrying it home to their families.

The country people need have no fear of coming to Paris, for if there was any of the disease here THE NEWS would be sure to warn them.

Why Not Here?

Cynthiana citizens are organizing a club to enforce the game and fish laws. A game warden will be employed. Bourbon county has had a warden employed for the past year or two with good results.—Flemingsburg Democrat.

To Meet in Louisville.

Chairman Allie W. Young, of the State Executive Committee has issued a call for the members of the Committee to meet at the Seelbach Hotel at Louisville, January 24, at 1 o'clock. The purpose of this meeting is to receive the report of the sub-committee concerning the State primary that is to be held May 9.

"How'd You Like to Be the Gas Man."

Cincinnati brokers, A. N. Hutton & Co., have secured a 20-day option on the Paris Gas Light Co. and the Paris Electric Light Co. plants.

If the deal goes through, which no doubt it will, the two plants will probably be consolidated, and when this is done you can no longer use that old bluff, "if you don't come and attend to my light and fix it so I can see, I will have it cut off and put in the other light." The company will have you coming and going, and will answer back, "cut loose."

Then and Now.

In examining the record books of the Christian Church, we find that the old church building cost $11,858.34. It was sold Saturday to Mr. John T. Hinton for $4,951.

Mr. Hinton contributed, when a poor boy, $10 toward the erection of the building. He and his immediate family have contributed toward the new church fund $5,700, besides his services given to the management of the building from the foundation up. The cost of the new church was about $54,000.

If there were more John T. Hinton's in Paris we would soon have a city that would easily lay Lexington or any other town in the State in the shade.

Riley Grannan Broke Again.

Riley Grannan, Kentucky's most famous plunger on the turf, whose operations in the ring are by-words, both in this country and Europe, is again without money. Within the last few weeks he has lost three small fortunes at the New Orleans track, the total of which is said to exceed $10,000.

At one time Grannan took $600 and run it up to $300,000 in a short while.

Up to five weeks ago Grannan did not have a penny to call his own. Then he went to New Orleans, where he attracted the attention of Odell & Payne. This firm offered to stake Riley to a $100,000 bank roll if he would go to San Francisco and make a book on the races. For some reason he refused to go to 'Frisco and the commission firm gave him $15,000 and told him to open a book at New Orleans. He soon lost this money. His roll was again replenished by Odell & Payne, and again he lost. Several days ago the firm again staked Grannan, and once more he is without funds. Whether the commission firm will again stake Grannan remains to be seen, and the chances are that they will, for the was nearly $40,000 to the good one day at New Orleans, according to report, but dropped the most of it the next day. He is a spectacular gambler in all that the word implies, and is certain to not remain without funds for any length of time. He is the sort of a man that any rich gambler likes to back, while he may lose for a time, he is apt to win $100,000 in a few days if luck runs his way. Grannan's home is this city.

A Good One Is Leased.

Mr. Catesby Woodford, owner of Raceland Stud, has leased for a fancy figure for a term of years, of Eugene Leigh, of London, England, the noted bay stallion, Tanzmeister, 14 years old, by Saraban (son of Muncester) dam Mizpah, by McGregor, winner of the 2,000 Guineas. The horse has been delivered to Woodford, at Paris, by Mr. Gus Straus, Leigh's American agent. Tanzmeister as a two-year-old won the 38th Biennial Stakes at Bath and the Michaelmas Stakes at Sandown Park. The next season he won the three-year-old renewal of the 38th Biennial Stakes at Bath, the Park Biennial Stakes at Kempton and the Marshall Stakes at Gatwick. He was second to Imp. Watercross in the Ascot Prince of Wales Stakes, conceding Mr. Haggin's importation 10 pounds.

Tim Murphy Sues Southern Road.

Mr. H. E. Hudson, of Knoxville, Tenn., an attorney for the Southern Railroad, was in Paris yesterday for the purpose of securing depositions from R. S. Porter and S. E. Borland, of the Grand Opera House, in the case of Tim Murphy, the actor, against the Southern Railroad.

Mr. Murphy last season had a contract with Southern road to carry his company from Knoxville, Tenn., to Lexington. The road refused to carry the company unless Murphy signed a release for all damages that might occur to the baggage during the trip. This Murphy declined to do, and it resulted in the engagement at Lexington on the 5th being canceled, and the company did not arrive in Paris on the 6th until 6:30 p. m. Murphy brought suit against the road for $10,000 damages.

LAVENDER LEAVES.

The waving corn was green and gold,
The damask roses blown,
The bees and busy spinning wheel
Kept up a drowsy drone.
When Mistress Standish, folding down
Her linen, white as snow,
Between it laid the lavender,
One summer long ago.

The slender spikes of grayish green,
Still moist with morning dew,
Recalled a garden sweet with box
Beyond the ocean's blue;
An English garden, quaint and old,
She nevermore might know;
And so she dropped a homesick tear
That summer long ago.

The yellow sheets grew worn and thin,
And fell in many a shred;
Some went to bind the soldiers' wounds,
And some to shroud the dead.
And Mistress Standish reads her soul
Where graves their shadows throw,
And violets blossom, planted there
In summers long ago.

But still between the royal rose
And lady lily tall,
Springs up the modest lavender
Beside the cottage wall.
The spider spreads her gossamer
Across it to and fro—
The ghost of linen laid to bleach
One summer long ago.

MYSTERIOUS MISS DACRES

By Mrs. Schuyler Crowninshield.

Copyright 1901, by J. B. Lippincott Co.

CHAPTER VI.—CONTINUED.

"You have neither of you enjoyed it," said I, nearly crying. "You are so suspicious, Elder Wynne,"—it's strange how easily I kept forgetting his double personality—"you see faults and frailties in every one, and as for Mr. Beldon, he has always hated her."

"I hate Miss Dacres?" said Mr. Beldon, coming out from behind the rosebush and up on to the piazza. "Yes, you, Mr. Beldon. What has the poor child ever done to you? Yet from the first you have disliked her. She was rude to you, I know, but you have been much worse to her."

"Still, I do not hate your boarder, Mrs. Brathwaite."

"I do not think that Mr. Beldon hates Miss Dacres," said Elder Wynne, taking his side against me. Mr. Beldon flung a scrutinizing glance at Elder Wynne.

"And why have you any opinion at all on the subject, Elder Wynne?" he asked.

But Elder Wynne was coughing, and could not answer.

When Mr. Beldon had mounted his wheel and ridden off to town, and Elder Wynne had ceased coughing, he said, looking up at me apologetically, "I always say too much, always. Somehow I hate to miss such a chance as this. And now I have a few little curios to show you, Mrs. Brathwaite." He arose and went into the hall and turned in to the room that had been Amaranthe's.

"How did you get in here?" I cried. "I have the key in my pocket."

"And, as you see, I have the key in the lock. Don't bother your head with foolish questions, dear Mrs. Brathwaite, but just see what I have found in your cellar." He closed the door, the shades were already lowered, and directed my gaze to the farther side of the bed. There, on chairs and on the table, which he had pushed behind the bed, between it and the wall, were various articles of silver, beautiful, rich pieces, some of which I recognized as having seen in the old days at the Hall, others with monograms and crests, which I recognized as being those of various country families near, though the articles themselves I had never seen. It made a goodly showing, although the silver was dull and needed silver polish. Elder Wynne nodded and tapped the table with his fingers.

"In your own cellar," he said. "It is strange that the cellar stairs should descend from Miss Dacres' room."

"Not at all," I said angrily. "There is a great deal that I cannot tell you, much that was told me in confidence, but I know exactly how those things must have got there." I had the man laughing in my mind. Of course it was he who had stolen the silver and had forced my boarder to allow him to deposit it in the cellar, but this I was bound by my promise to Amaranthe not to divulge.

"You seem to go about my house, Elder Wynne, exactly as if you owned it."

"I do," said he, chuckling, a queer, subdued inward chuckle, "but not as Elder Wynne, as Bob Jennings at your service. By the way, let me tell you something else. I have, I fear, had to tell you many an unpleasant thing since you have so kindly given me a home. Do you consider your aunt quite a helpless invalid?"

"She is," said I. "Every one knows it."

"I am sorry, dear lady, to disabuse your confidence in her, but she is quite as able to walk as—no, not quite as able as you are, but she walks very well." My thoughts flew to the money. "No, she did not take that," he said, reading my mind. "You have heard, I suppose, of a malade imaginaire, Mrs. Brathwaite? It's a French expression, I believe."

"Yes," I said, slowly, faintly recalling the expression met with in some of my readings long ago. "Is that what Aunt Jane Mary is?"

"No, she's not even that," I would dered why he had asked the question. "She knows perfectly that she has nothing the matter with her but fat—pure, unadulterated fat—and laziness, the one caused by the other."

"I will not have you speak so of my relatives, Elder Wynne," I said. "I am sure that President Smith would never have—"

"Oh, yes, yes, he would," said the old man in his weak voice. "How do you know all this, Elder Wynne?" I asked.

"Just the way I know all the other things. Just the way that I know about the Lost Tribes." He smiled. "But I forgot, that subject is tabooed. I learn by study, and interest in my work, and various experiments. Do you suppose that the faint creakings that are heard at night all have their origin in the meanderings of rats or denizens of the spirit world? No, Mrs. Brathwaite, I have walked about your house and grounds for many an hour after you are in bed."

"I never hear your cough," I said. "No, I manage at such times to suppress my cough. It has its uses, but not at midnight. As I have said, I walk about your house and grounds when all the world is wrapped in sleep, and I have never met with rats or mythical spirits as yet."

"Have you ever met with any—any—thing—one?" I asked, nervously.

"Never met with them. They know nothing of my being about, but there is a great deal going on in your house at night, dear Mrs. Brathwaite, while you are sleeping your weary, tired sleep, that you do not see, even in dreams."

It gave me an eerie feeling to think of people being about the house, our own home, being wide awake, and passing up and down the stairs or through the halls, when I was away in the land of oblivion.

"Be comforted, dear lady," continued Elder Wynne. "While I am here they shall not harm you or yours, and I shall not go until they go."

He gave me comfort, as he always did when he spoke seriously to me. "But about Aunt Jane Mary?"

"There is not much that I can tell you," replied Elder Wynne. "I have discovered that she is a night-walker, but not a sleep-walker. I should not jump and run so fast on those poor tired legs of yours, if I were you, dear Mrs. Brathwaite, when her damned little bell rings, and I should not wind that electrical machine for an hour or two every night just to give her fat old legs a tickling sensation."

I was shocked at Elder Wynne's profanity and vulgarity. It seemed impossible that that dreadful word, which I had heard but once in my life, and that from a man whose horse had run away and thrown him out in the road by our gate, could have been spoken by this gentle appearing old man. An elder of the church. Ah! There! I had forgotten Bob Jennings again.

CHAPTER VII.

I went to my bed early that night, but not to sleep for long. At about 12 o'clock I was sent for very hurriedly. Miss Elizabeth had been taken suddenly ill. I remained with her all that night and the next day, sending word to my house that Gloria must attend to the wants of Aunt Jane Mary and my boarders. In the early afternoon I went into the little sitting room, where Amaranthe, who had regained her calm some days ago, was lying on the couch. Her foot was almost well now, but still she humored it. She was reading, and as she laid her book down, I saw her eyes glance upward. Mine followed them. She was lying just under that mantelpiece. I saw that she was looking at the paper with which Miss Elizabeth kept the upright slab in place.

She said nothing, and neither did I. I felt then that if Miss Elizabeth intended the jewels for her niece, it would be better for her to take her into her confidence, show them to her, and then send them to a bank or some place of safe deposit. I determined to speak to Miss Elizabeth as soon as she could bear it. She had suffered great pain all day, and was forced to lie in her bed, and what worried me greatly was the fact that Miss Evelyn had also been attacked and in the same manner.

"What do you think is the matter with my aunts?" asked Amaranthe, when I went into the little sitting room to get a cup of tea.

"I'm sure I can't tell," said I. "I am somewhat anxious, as Dr. Williams is far away at his father's bedside, and this young man from the village does not seem to know much." Amaranthe now got up with my help and walked about the room and along the corridor. I was so glad of this that I begged her to go in to see Aunt Elizabeth.

Her face flushed scarlet, always a sign of agitation with her. "Don't ask me," said she, earnestly. "I cannot bear a sick room. I am afraid that you think me very heartless, but I am so constitutionally. Dear daddy was just so. It mortifies me dreadfully, but so it is. I had to do it to earn my living, but always hated it. I think we should have a nurse, don't you?"

"Yes," said I. "I think we should." "I wish you would speak to the doctor," said she.

I went back to Miss Elizabeth and sat with her until nine o'clock. Then when she had fallen quietly asleep I returned to the little sitting room again. To my surprise a stranger arose and greeted me. It was a woman in the dress of those pious sisters who go about among the sick and sorrowful. She bowed and left the room by a farther door. I sat there wondering who had sent for her. I had not seen the doctor since an hour earlier. In a few moments Amaranthe came in.

"Who is that woman?" she asked. "You mean the sister?" said I. "I thought that you had sent for her."

For Amaranthe was assuming now the role of mistress of the Hall, as the ladies wished and urged her to do.

"No," she said, "I never sent for her. Probably it was that little doctor. Well, I don't know but it's a sensible thing, after all, only I should not have let him send for a sister of charity. I don't like them. Dear old Wibby, you must go home now, and let that woman—ugh! I don't like her looks—that sister, take the care off your hands."

I promised her, because I saw that she was determined, that I would go back to my home and rest, but I had no intention of keeping my promise.

"Very well," said I. "Good-by, then; I will come over to-morrow."

I went back to Miss Elizabeth's room. There she lay in the middle of the great bed where the squire had breathed his last. She was awake again, and as I came in she raised herself up in the bed in a very excited state, her lips trembling nervously.

"What is this?" she asked, "about a nurse having come into the house? I told that little doctor—you know who he is, Sophronia, old Allibone the butcher's son; of course, he knows nothing but anatomy"—she smiled faintly—"I told him that I would not have a nurse. I positively forbade him to send a nurse to this house, and yet what does he do but go right off and get one."

"It's too bad," said I. "If you don't want her, you needn't have her. I will go and dismiss her, if I can find her. Perhaps she has gone down to the kitchen." I went towards the door, but remembered as I touched the knob that there was yet something that I ought to say. "I want to tell you," I said, "that Amaranthe is greatly distressed at your illness."

"Dear child!" exclaimed Miss Elizabeth with fervor.

"She said that had her foot and ankle been all right, she should have come in here and taken the entire care of you. She referred to her calling as a trained nurse."

"No child of Eugene Darlington's should ever have worked for her living, Sophronia," said Miss Elizabeth, sternly. "Tell the child so, and tell her that I should not allow her, weak as she must be, to stand over me and nurse me. When I am better, please God! to-morrow, I shall be glad to have her come in."

"She has been to see Miss Evelyn," said I, for Amaranthe had told me so, "and sat with her for a half hour."

"Dear little girl! So sweet! so unselfish! What a treasure we have found, Sophronia. What a treasure! Now, Sophronia, do you go and dismiss that woman and then come back here. If there is anything to pay, pay it out of this purse," Miss Elizabeth took a fat pocket-book from under her pillow and held it out to me. I went back and took it from her hand, and passed out softly, closing the door. I went straight to the little sitting room, expecting to find Amaranthe there still. The room was but poorly lighted. As I opened the door the strange nurse came towards me from the fire-place.

"Is Miss Darlington here?" I asked. The woman hesitated, looking inquiringly at me. I now noticed how very black was her hair, smooth and glossy under her white cap, and saw also that one of her front teeth was gone.

"Miss Amaranthe, perhaps I should have said."

"Oh, the young lady with the yellow hair. She went out of that door just now." The woman was thin, as thin as Amaranthe herself, and she spoke in a queer, cracked voice with an almost childish lisp. Her whole appearance filled me with distrust.

"I will look for her later," I said. "At present I have come to tell you that Miss Elizabeth Darlington is quite nervous, and prefers not to have strangers in the house, and she has asked me to tell you so."

The young woman drew herself up stiffly.

"This is a very strange proceeding," she said. "The Doctor—by the way, has he left the house?"

"He left at eight o'clock," said I. "He said that he should not return before nine in the morning."

"I am sorry that he is not here," said she freezingly. "Then he would have to bear the brunt of bringing me into a house where I am not wanted."

"I think myself that it is a great piece of presumption," said I, as I pictured little Johnny Allibone having had the assurance to even step foot inside of Darlington Hall. "But the regular doctor, always called in by the family, is away, and we had to take this young man or nothing. From where did he obtain you?"

"At the sisterhood just outside of the town," said she. "I shall feel very much mortified, naturally, to return there so late at night. Can I not stay until the morning? They will think that she blame lies with me, that I have committed some breach of etiquette, or have made some mistake in the case; really, it is very mortifying."

"No one can be more sorry about it than I am, and than Miss Darlington herself is," said I. "She has commissioned me to offer you—"

I began to open the pocket-book.

"Does Miss Darlington think that she can soothe my wounded honor with money?" It seemed to me that the subject did not call for so much dignified anger. "No! kindly tell Miss Darlington that I could not accept a penny at her hands. Good evening! I shall reckon with Dr. Allibone for this," and she swept out of the room.

It was all very unpleasant, extremely so! What unpleasant things do happen in this world! There was Aunt Jane Mary, always considered the soul of truth and probity, getting out of her bed and wandering round the house at night. There was that tiresome Elder Wynne, for I had become very weary of Bob Jennings and his double personality, showing me things that he said he had found secreted in my cellar. Heaven knows when, perhaps by these men who had chloroformed Amaranthe; and between Baldy Towner, and Bill's being dead, and my almost wishing that Gloria was, I felt that life had become a pretty problem.

I sat me down upon the sofa, which always stood against the fireplace. I don't know why, but on those hot days and nights there was a pleasant draught across and under it up the chimney. I lay my head back upon the pillow. I was tired, tired! Should I sleep? I raised my eyes and encountered the under side of the marble slab that rested upon the two upright slabs, and as I looked my glance fell upon the loosened one which Miss Elizabeth had said, which in fact I knew, concealed the case of rubies. The paper which had held it in place was gone, the least touch would loosen it. I shook the slab. It fell forward against the sofa. I arose in tremendous haste, and, pushing away the sofa, lowered the slab upon the floor. There was nothing behind it. The cavity was empty!

HIS WIFE'S TRIUMPH.

An Example of Fortitude and Determination That Did Not Go for Naught.

It has been the fate of many men of letters to have ill health bearing them down as they struggled on toward literary achievement. Thus beset in recent times were Stevenson, Richard Jeffries and J. R. Green. Each of these, it happened, had a high-hearted wife to keep him up, even to help him with the actual labor of writing. "The Life and Letters of J. R. Green" show forth a great and sweet man; they show, too, a wife, whose sympathy and fortitude helped to make his accomplishment possible, says Youth's Companion.

In copying the vast amount of manuscript of her husband's books Mrs. Green contracted writer's cramp and was forced to stop using her right hand. This looked like a final obstacle in the way of the invalid, who did much of his thinking in bed, and could not write himself. But Mrs. Green set to work at once learning to write with her left hand.

One of her first practice pages, which she was about to destroy with the rest, her husband took quietly and put in his pocket. Years afterward, when ill health seemed unbearable and in discouragement he felt that he could not work, he used to take out that piece of paper, a living record of his wife's triumph over difficulty. When he saw the painful, patient strokes by which Mrs. Green had learned to write with her left hand, he could work on with something near to inspiration.

Enough of the King.

The gentle art of speeding a partying guest is not new. The story from Hertfordshire, as told in the "Victoria County History" series, reveals the method tried on King James I. Hunting had taken the place of state affairs in the monarch's affections and one morning a favorite hound was missing. The dog appeared the next day, bearing a message tied to his neck: "Good Mr. Jowler—We pray you speak to the king for us (he hearing you every day and so doth not us) that it will please his majesty to go back to London, for else the country will be undone, all our provisions spent already."—Youth's Companion.

A Fish Story from India.

This happened in India. A correspondent of the Asian, the leading sporting paper of the east, is responsible for it:

"It was tempting fortune right under a bridge with beautiful fat worms, when I was taken hold of. I commenced to wind in very cautiously, but all of a sudden felt the resistance to be dead weight—no pull, no struggle, no kick, no rush, and yet the strain on the line was 'fishy' in the extreme. And what do you think I had captured? An old boot, in which was a large eel firmly hooked, and inside the toe of the boot were 13 fat little eels."

BRUIN AND THE PRUNES.

Odd Exhibition of Bear Nature Witnessed by a New York Man in Yellowstone National Park.

Henry Altenbrand, of this city, saw a surprising exhibition of bear nature on a recent visit to Yellowstone National park. Bears are abundant in that great preserve, and as it is against the law to kill them, they have become impudent to a marked degree, says the New York Sun.

Late one night the guests at the hotel where Mr. Altenbrand was stopping were waked by a great hubbub on the premises and learned that a big bear had battered in the door and was then in possession of the kitchen.

"It seems," says Mr. Altenbrand, "that the hotel cook had stewed a lot of prunes that day and had stored them away in a two-gallon jar. Bears are very fond of sweets of that kind, and this bear had probably got scent of the prunes and come to get possession of them."

"At any rate, the cook had heard a great banging at the kitchen door in the night and had hurried down, kerosene lamp in hand, just in time to see the door tumble to pieces and a big bear force his way through the breach."

"The cook put his lamp down on the kitchen table and made a great show of rushing on the bear to drive him out, but the bear made a rush himself and one that meant business. The cook took to his heels, got out of the door into the adjoining room in time to escape the bear and slammed the door behind him."

"There were windows in the kitchen so that from a porch on the outside any one could see what was going on inside. Those of us who hustled around to see what was up got to the kitchen door just as the cook came tearing out, only half a jump ahead of the bear. Then we viewed the further proceedings through the windows."

"The lamp lighted the room well and we saw the bear dancing about on his hind feet, with his nose in the air sniffing. When he came to the pantry he stopped, yanked the door open, went inside and soon came out with the big jar of prunes, holding it against his chest with his forelegs clasped around it."

"He teetered with it to the table, where the lamp was, set it down on the table, and dabbing first one paw in the jar and then the other, fetching out a handful each time, dripping with juice, he fed himself prunes with a gusto and a comical-looking enjoyment on his face that beat any funny picture of a bear the funniest artist ever drew."

"The bear had been at this odd feast perhaps a minute, when we saw the head of another bear poked in at the kitchen door. There was an eager, longing expression on his face, and after a moment's inspection of the interior he crept cautiously all the way in."

"The head of a third bear instantly appeared at the battered door, and then we saw that there were two more bears pressing on behind that one, plainly eager to get inside. These bears were smaller than the one which had committed the burglary."

"They got into the kitchen before the big bear at the table paid any attention to them. Then he suddenly quitted his feast, fell upon the intruders tooth and claw and with hair raising, snapping of jaws and fierce snarls and growls, threw them out. Then he went back to his feast."

"The outside bears hung around awhile, whining and growling and making one or two feints at rushing in and making it warm for the lucky one at the feast and then slouched away and disappeared in the darkness."

"The burglar bear ate every prune in the jar, sopped the juice out with his paws and licked them clean of every drop, and with a deep grunt of satisfaction waddled slowly out of the house and went his leisurely way. We were in the midst of our hilarity over this extraordinary entertainment when out of the darkness, not far away, came most unearthly sounds of savage combat."

"Jaws snapping, snarls, howlings, growls, yells and the smashing and crashing of undergrowth indicated a fierce battle among wild beasts. The range of the struggle shortly brought it near enough for us to see that the fight was among bears, and as there were four small ones and one big one we naturally looked upon them as the burglar bear that had gone away a few minutes before full of prunes and the bears that had been shut out of the feast."

"The fight was short. The big bear sent one of the smaller ones sprawling ten feet away with one mighty cuff, and that bear never rose again. His companions forced the fighting, and when they went limping away after the fight was over the big bear lay helpless from his wounds, howling in pain. He was so badly torn up that he had to be shot."

"Of course, none of us believed anything else but that four disappointed bears had lain in wait for the greedy burglar bear and attacked him. Whether that was true or not, it seems to me that after what I saw of bears that night there will be no bear story hereafter that I won't come pretty near believing."

Tablets of Fresh Air.

Fresh air tablets are a preparation discovered by a French scientist. It was while investigating acetylene that he discovered that he could combine certain chemicals into a tablet which, on being dropped into water, dissolved and gave forth pure oxygen. These tablets will be exceedingly useful in a closed carriage, a submarine boat, a mine, or anywhere else where the air has become vitiated.

IN HIGH POLITICAL OFFICE.

Mr. Ware, commissioner of pensions, was not much inclined to accept the position when it was first offered him. He told President Roosevelt so, saying: "I don't like that job." The president frankly answered: "I assure you, Mr. Ware, that the longer you have the place the less you will like it, but still I urge you to accept."

Congressman Loudenslager came upon a party of friends in a cafe and said to them, with appearance of some excitement: "Ever hear of this fellow who can stick out his tongue and touch his ear?" All declared such a thing to be impossible. "Oh, no it isn't. Why, I can do it," said the man from New Jersey. Everybody present made a bet with him on the subject, and then Loudenslager won all around by sticking out his tongue and touching his ear with his finger.

Senator Heifield, of Idaho, says that when he was campaigning last fall in that state he did a good deal of traveling in a buggy. One day a wheel came off his conveyance and he went to a near-by farmhouse owned by a huge Swede. "Can you tell me where I can find a monkey wrench?" asked the senator. The farmer looked at him gravely for a moment and replied: "This bin a sheep ranch."

"Bout two mile over thar you find Ole Hansen's cattle ranch. Don't know whar you find monkey ranch."

Mr. Bowen, the American minister to Venezuela, has been in the consular service for a dozen years. He is a son of the late Henry C. Bowen, of the New York Independent. He was transferred to his present post from Spain, where, as consul at Barcelona, he got a good insight into Spanish character. Besides being a diplomat he is a poet, a fighter and a linguist, speaking French, Italian and Spanish. Born in New York, he was educated in Germany, Italy and France before entering Yale and the law school of Columbia university. When he was a student at Yale he had a little difficulty with a tutor on matters not affecting his scholarship and he was graduated somewhat prematurely. Minister Bowen has achieved an honorable distinction in the public service, besides writing a book on international law which is rated of standard quality.

CHURCH AND CLERGY.

A careful count of church attendance in the borough of Manhattan—that is, in New York city proper—showed an average of 74,000 Protestant adults against 279,000 Catholic adults attending church in the morning on three consecutive Sundays. And yet there are, we suppose, twice as many nominal Protestants as Catholics in that city.

When Bishop Thoburn went to India, 38 years ago, a European gentleman pointed out to him a brick pillar, and said: "You might as well try to make a Christian out of that pillar as out of one of these people." To-day there are in India nearly 3,000,000 native Christians, and among them are doctors, lawyers, judges, editors, teachers and business men.

The annual report from the Harput district in Asia Minor shows that the average attendance of the 32 missionary Sunday schools is nearly 4,300, and of the 41 congregations almost 5,600. The personnel of the station includes 14 pastors, four preachers, two colporteurs, five Bible women, five other helpers and 60 teachers, a total of 90 besides the 36 native teachers in Ephraim college.

The Better Way

By ALICE C. McKEEVER.

"LOUISE!" Yes, auntie. "Where is Bob Hunter?" "He has gone home."

"So early. Why did he go?" "He has letters to write, he said." The old woman glanced at the girl, anxiously; her eyes were dim, but she fancied that Louise looked as if she had been crying.

"My dear," she said, softly. "Bob is only a man—and you wouldn't let any sense of duty stand between you?"

The girl flushed deeply, and turned her lovely face toward her questioner. "No, auntie, don't worry, it isn't a question of duty."

"I thought perhaps—Bob is so close, he would object to me, and I wouldn't, not for the world, keep you apart. The poorhouse has no terrors for me—not if it makes you happy."

"You have a queer notion of what would make me happy. No, you are all I have left, and we'll 'bide a wee together.'"

And the girl pressed her soft cheek against the one so old and wrinkled. "It's hard," murmured the old aunt. "First there was the old father and mother you nursed so long, and now there's me—and he's a likely lad as ever was. He'll be rich, some day."

"Yes," said the girl, quietly. "I know it. He's made of the stuff that produces rich men. Let us forget him, for he is not of our world."

"But I hoped," persisted the old woman, sadly, "that he might lift you, at least, up to his world. You work so hard, you are only a girl. Your life ought to have been so different."

"His world is not above mine," exclaimed Louise, earnestly; "it is far below. I do not care to step down. Never mention this again, auntie, please."

But when the winter of snow and rain set in, and Louise had to plod back and forth a mile through the storm to the little millinery store, where she was hired at 75 cents a day, the old woman more than once brought up the name of her old-time lover.

"He's gone to the city," she said, one day, "getting a salary that would make me rich, one year of it."

Louise, pale and weary, answered nothing, but the old woman continued, plaintively:

"Now, if it hadn't been for me you'd be a living like a queen. Seems like instead of helping you, as I want to, I only take all your hopes away. Dear, dear, how long I do live?"

"Hush!" said the girl, sternly. "How unkind you are! You are all I have in the world. You are all I have ever had since—since they went away."

"You're 25," said the old woman, softly, "you're the prettiest girl for miles around. I always thought—"

"I'd marry. Well, I won't," answered Louise, brightly, "for I'm determined to be an old maid."

Bob Hunter had been in the city 20 years. He was no longer known as Bob, but as Robert Hunter, the millionaire.

He had friends, such as they were, astute business financiers like himself; servants who ran at his bidding, but not one person in the whole world who loved him.

Even the little errand boys knew him for what he was, hard, cold and uncharitable. They were paid their stipulated prices, never a cent more. This world and this life was only a place to live long in, in order to grow rich and richer.

He seldom recalled his old country home; there were no ties there to hold him. Only, sometimes there came a fleeting memory of a fair young face, the one face in the world he had truly loved.

"She was a little fool," he would mutter; "she's been a martyr long enough. I didn't propose to saddle myself with that old aunt. Well, she chose her way, I hope she's enjoyed it."

Accident brought back his old home vividly at last. There was a railroad running through that part of the country that he desired to buy.

"I'll run out there a few days," he said; "it will be prudent to do so, and I wonder how the old place looks by this time, anyway. Nobody will recognize me, I dare say."

But they did; the newspapers had heralded his name, and the old neighbors who remembered him as a boy wanted to see the great man he had become.

A number of old friends, as they were pleased to call themselves, undertook to show him around and to point out the improvements that 20 years had brought about.

There was a new courthouse, a new jail and lastly a fine large building lately erected for the county poor.

Bob did not care a copper cent to be shown any of these affairs, but he had his own reasons for being civil, hence he permitted himself to be dragged hither and thither and at last actually found himself inside the handsome new poorhouse.

"The matron will show us through," said the obsequious friend. "Who knows but you may run across some of your old acquaintances," he added, with a light laugh.

In one of the large halls they passed a woman bending over a little child, who was sobbing bitterly. The woman sat in a low armchair, and her face was hidden, but the mass of brown hair rolled in a knot at the nape of her neck was heavily streaked with gray.

"Get out of the road, Jimmy," said the matron. "You are always getting hurt," then, turning to the woman, she said: "Have you finished the shirts?"

The woman raised her head and replied, softly, that she had. The sunlight streaming in through the window brought her head and face and slight form into bold relief.

He saw her plainly, her voice had betrayed her even before he had known or guessed her identity. Yes, it was Louise, older, frailer, helpless and a beggar, no, not exactly that, for it seemed even here she was a toiler as of old.

"My God!" he thought, "how long has she been here?"

But they hurried him on, and when once more in the open air he felt he had not reached it any too soon. He was never so near a fainting fit in his life.

"Are you ill, Mr. Hunter?" inquired more than one.

"A little," he replied. "I think I will go to my room at the hotel and rest until supper."

But no sooner did he find himself alone than he sent for one of the maids, a girl that he knew had always lived in the place.

"Mary," said he, "I want to ask you a few questions, and you're not to tell anyone a thing I shall say. If I make you a present of five dollars, do you think you can hold your tongue?"

Mary tossed her head and eyed the five-dollar bill.

"I can tell the truth without being paid. As for telling anything else, no money could make me do that."

"Very well, my girl, I only want the truth. When was Louise Upton taken to—"

He did not finish, something seemed to choke back the word.

The girl's eyes opened and grew round as saucers. Ah, she remembered now hearing her granny tell that Louise Upton had once had a lover who had gone away and grown rich. Could it be this was he?

"Only a year ago," she answered, softly, pitying the man she saw was really suffering. "She worked as long as she could, but it was rheumatism, crippled her feet and she could not run a machine, then her hands were bad, too, and—there wasn't anyone to take care of her, so she asked to be put where she is."

"How long has her aunt been dead?" "Her aunt! Oh, I can just remember her; about 15 years, I think. But a nicer, sweeter lady than Miss Louise couldn't be found. Lots of us cried and would have helped her, but she said no, she would go where she belonged."

"Where she belonged!" repeated the rich man, in a tone of voice that made the girl's eyes sparkle.

"Here is your money; take it, and I'll not forget you, either."

"Thank you," said the maid, smiling joyously. "You are very kind."

Very kind! Did the walls take up the words, and echo and re-echo them? Kind, very kind! Him; kind?

He sat for an hour with closed eyes and compressed lips, then, as the shades of evening stole around, he passed out and sought once more the matron of the county infirmary.

"It is not the hour for visitors," she said, crossly.

But when he explained that he must see one of the inmates privately, and tendered another five-dollar bill, he was quickly admitted.

He waited for her in a cold, damp room, called the reception-room, and she came at last—at last. The door opened softly; there was a thump, thump of two crutches over the floor, and Louise, wondering and surprised, stood before him.

He bowed and wheeled forward a small sofa, upon which she sank, more and more surprised, for she did not recognize him.

"Louise," he said, huskily, coming out into the stronger light. "Louise, don't you know me?"

"Bob—Bob Hunter!"

"Yes," he said, taking a seat at her side, "Bob Hunter. Don't you want to shake hands?" She half extended her hand, and then drew it back.

"Don't, if you don't want to."

"Oh, it isn't that—but my hand—"

He knew, when he took it almost by force; the pretty, white hand that had been now drawn and toil-marked.

He held it between both his own, his head bent over it, while a hot tear fell upon it.

Louise felt her breath coming and going at a most surprising rate, while she could not speak.

"I've thought it all over, Louise, ever since I found you here, this afternoon. I never knew what a cold-hearted villain I was before, but I know it well enough now."

Still Louise was silent. "I loved you. I have never loved anyone else, but money was my god, and—and it conquered me. But to-day, when I saw you so frail and helpless, and so poor, and thought of all your life has been, and contrasted it with what it might have been, had I not been so cruel in the past, I felt that I wanted to go out and shoot myself."

"But you didn't," said Louise, smiling with something of her old brightness.

"No, because back of it was a little hope, a faint ray, indeed, but I thought, perhaps, even if you hated me, you might let me see that—that you never wanted for anything. If you don't, I won't answer for the consequences."

"Fie, Bob?"

"Of course there's a better way—that is, if you don't hate me, after all, which do you choose?"

The cold and cheerless room seemed to change to one of radiant splendor, when he bent over to hear her low reply:

"I have always tried to choose 'the better way.'—Boston Budget.

THE BOY TURNED OUT.

Knowledge Gained at First Hand, in His Case, Was Not Easily Forgotten.

He was a boy of 12 who was at the zoo with his father to see the sights, and as they stood before the cage occupied by the chimpanzee the boy inquired:

"Father, do them things like boys?" "Mebbe they do, my son," replied the father; "but I guess I wouldn't git too near."

"But that one wants to shake hands." "Yes, he 'pears to; but I wouldn't shake."

"Don't you think he wants to be friends?" "Mebbe so, but you kin jest wink at him to let him know how you feel."

That didn't exactly satisfy the boy, however. The "chimpanzee" insisted on reaching out his black paw for a friendly grip, and while the father's back was turned the lad extended his hand, says the Boston Globe.

Next instant his howl caused a rush of the crowd to see what was the matter, and as he held up a finger which was bitten to the bone and danced about, the father produced a handkerchief to tie it up and explained to the people:

"He's my son Claudius, and he's a great hand to find out things. He's just found out that them critters hev teeth, and if he ever gits over this, he won't never want to shake hands with no more monkeys."

The Seaboard Air Line Railway, of Portsmouth, Va., is advertising a beautiful, but comparatively little known, region on the West Coast of Florida in three booklets called "The Land of Manatee." They are issued by the Seaboard, but can scarcely be termed a railroad advertisement, as the only mention of the road is in a brief and modest note printed on the inside of one of the cover pages. They are, in fact, a description of Manatee County, Florida, with some account of its history and its many interesting features which will appeal equally to the general reader, the investor, the fruit and vegetable grower, and to the tourist and sportsman. The author is Mr. Morton M. Cassaday, a writer of experience. The beauty of the Manatee country is well described, and the marvelous fertility of the soil and equally wonderful healthfulness of the climate are told of in a way to leave no doubt in the reader's mind. Manatee county must be the garden-spot of all Florida, and the wonder is that it has not sooner been settled and the latent riches of its soil turned into good American dollars. A most charming feature of these booklets is their typographical appearance. They are printed on hand-made paper, and are delightfully illustrated with photographic half-tone plates and ornamented with decorative designs in flat monotypes that make them really valuable brochures. Persons interested in Florida, and especially in the possibilities of orange growing and truck gardening below the frost line, will find these booklets not only interesting, but full of valuable and practical information. They may be had from representatives of the Seaboard Air Line Railway, or upon application to the General Passenger Agent, Portsmouth, Va.

A PASTOR WHO WAS BEFRIENDED BY AN EMPEROR SAVED BY PE-RU-NA.

Rev. H. Stuebner, of Elkhorn, Wis., is pastor of the Evangelical Lutheran St. John's Church of that place. Rev. Stuebner is the possessor of two bibles presented to him by Emperor William of Germany. Upon the fly leaf of one of the bibles the Emperor has written in his own handwriting a text.

This honored pastor, in a recent letter to The Peruna Medicine Co., of Columbus, Ohio, says concerning their famous catarrh remedy, Peruna:

The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, Ohio.

Gentlemen: "I had hemorrhages of the lungs for a long time, and all despaired of me. I took Peruna and was cured. It gave me strength and courage, and made healthy, pure blood. It increased my weight, gave me a healthy color, and I feel well. It is the best medicine in the world. If everyone kept Peruna in the house it would save many from death every year."—H. STUEBNER.

Thousands of people have catarrh who would be surprised to know it, because it has been called some other name than catarrh. The fact is catarrh is catarrh wherever located; and another fact which is of equally great importance, is that Peruna cures catarrh wherever located.

Latest Fashion Notes.

A PRETTY SHORT COAT.

This very novel coat is suitable for either velvet or peau de soie, and recalls some of the portraits of earlier days. The deep collar, which may almost be called a cape, is edged with Vandyck-pointed Irish crochet lace, and the coat which is here made of velvet, is ornamented with straps of peau de soie stitched with Corticelli stitching silk, and is further decorated by small buttons and dainty bowknots.

The yoke jacket, recalling the Norfolk, returns to us with a few modifications, and the loose front. The yoke and the plait effect remains, the plaits in this instance being simulated and on the fronts reaching to the belt, while in back the plait-shaped piece is very wide where it joins the yoke, then narrows to the waist and widens a trifle again on the back. The yoke is cut with points and adorned with buttonsaprently fastening the belt on either side of the front. The revers, collar and cuffs are of plaid cloth.

Confederate Notes.

—The birth day of Gen. Robert E. Lee was observed at Covington on Monday, by a joint meeting of the Cincinnati and Covington chapters of the Daughters of the Confederacy. A fine banquet was given at Masonic Temple at 6 p. m., and at 8 o'clock the Circuit Court room was filled with a crowded audience from the two cities. After an invocation by Archbishop Elder, of Cincinnati, and "Dixie" by a male quartette, addresses were made by Dr. Henderson, Gen. Bennett Young, Ex-Congressman Berry, Mayor Johnson, Judge Tarvin and Capt. Stephen G. Sharp. About fifty old Confederates were there decorated with "The Southern Cross of Honor" by the Daughters of the Confederacy, among them, Capt. James R. Rogers, A. T. Forsyth and Judge Russell Mann, of this county, Rev. H. A. M. Henderson, of Cincinnati, Rev. Father Thomas S. Major, of Frankfort, Captains Ed. Taylor, of Cincinnati, Ben Ashbrook, of Covington, and T. E. Moore, of Lexington all ex-Bourbons were recipients of these beautiful bronze medals.

Miss Iva McCarney, formerly, of Paris, now living in Cincinnati and a member of Robert Palton Chapter U. D. C., was present and assisted in presentation of the bronze medals.

Mrs. Ida Hamilton Stoner, Past State President, U. D. C., in a beautiful address, bestowed the medal upon Capt. Ed. Taylor, an officer who served in the regiment of which her late husband was Lieutenant-Colonel.
